THE true blues guitar is back. The February 1999 release of Nanaimo, B.C. native David Gogo's newest album Bare Bones on the ragged pup records label signals the beginning of a new phase in the career of "... one of this country's hottest bluesmen".

This album, one of four albums released by Cordova Bay/ragged pup, is a departure from his traditional electric guitar driven projects and steps back to the acoustic roots of the music he loves. His mastery of the National Steel guitar, and for that matter every kind of guitar, mixed with his distinctive vocal style creates a collection of music that will attract everyone from the acoustic blues purists to the funk rock fans.

After taking time off to re establish his musical sense of direction Gogo is ready to show that he truly stands amongst the many great names he has played with on world stages. With his band the Persuaders he has shared the stage with the likes of Johnny Winter, John Mayall, The Blues Traveller, B.B. King and Albert Collins. He toured in Europe with The Fabulous Thunderbirds and in the U.S. with Joe Satriani and now he is set to step out and create his own distinctive mark on the world.

February appears to be an auspicious month for David. February 1997 saw the release of his raucous Dine Under The Stars (Cordova Bay re-released this in the USA and Canada) along with the acoustic complement - Bare Bones - in February 1999. These coup de resistance performances capture the high energy performance style that is G o g o 's trademark as both an electric and acoustic "take no prisoners" live performer. The 3rd release by Gogo in 1999 was the electric studio recording - Change of Pace. This album has seen three rock singles released: Sad & Lonely, Face in the Mirror and the Bob Dylan classic (It's All Over Now) Baby Blue.

All of these albums have been released in the United Kingdom and the USA (Change of Pace in April 2001). In addition Halfway To Memphis - a new electric blues recording - was released in Canada in March 2001.

He has been compared to "Johnny Winter singing with Stevie Ray Vaughan". He has been nominated for Juno's and was named Musician of the Year by the Pacific Music Industry Association. He has been lauded and applauded and now he is back and he's "rawkin".

Western Canada's foremost tribute to Led Zeppelin returns to Buds to grind out the best of the best. Zeppelin fans get a real treat has John Lisi convincingly delivers Jimmy Page's trademark riffs punctuated by Dave Cummines bombastic Bonham inspired drumming. If previous engagements at Buds are any indication, you'll have to show up early to avoid waiting in line to join the standing room only crowd. Kashmir pulls out all the stops to crank out your favourite Led Zep tunes.

RUSSELL JACKSON

Russell Jackson was born in Memphis and raised in Wichita Kansas. By the time he was only 25 years old, he had gained such a reputation as a bass player, he was invited to play with the great B.B. King Orchestra. For the next 7 years he toured the world and played on such great recordings of B.B.'s such as "Live at Ole Miss" and "Live from Midem".

In 1987 he along with ex B.B. King drummer Tony Coleman formed the highly acclaimed rhythm section known as the Silent Partners. The 'Partners' toured and recorded with such blues greats as Charlie Musselwhite, Katie Webster, Matt Murphy and Sonny Rhodes, as well as headlining their own dates.

Jackson moved to Vancouver in 1991, where he formed the Russell Jackson Band to tour Canada and the U.S.. His perfection of the slap bass technique makes people sit up and take notice and can be heard on his 1994 CD release 'The Alley Man'
